

PETER MILLER

Peter is a senior change leader, currently building a portfolio career of advisory, consulting and board roles. He studied Engineering at Oxford before joining the oil and gas industry, spending nearly 30 years with Shell and BP. Working across refining, chemicals and offshore production, he has held executive roles in Operations, Business Management, Strategic Planning and Transformation in the UK and US.

He developed and ran the highly successful North Sea Transformation programme from 2018 which involved change in almost every area of the business, harnessing different ways of working (including agile and lean), digital and technology. He spent 2020 working as part of the global “Reinvent BP” programme, helping to reposition BP to play a lead role in the energy transition.

Peter is passionate about helping leadership teams drive change, deliver value and be the best they can be. He lives in Aberdeen, married to Gillian and has two children, Ben, 20 and Holly, 18. He enjoys watching sport (of all kinds), getting out and about in the forests and countryside and cycling (with ever more frequent coffee stops!).
